

Dear Friends,

The batteries are charging. The lenses are being cleaned. The lights are being tested and the microphones are prepared. Lights, Camera, Action!

There's nothing like spring and the blossoming of a new film on the horizon!!! We have film shoots scheduled with the Cherokee, the Tuscarora, the Waccamaw and elders from other tribes and traditions. Its going to be good.

As we've said before, stories are often a great way to reconnect with our natural heritage. My mom was a storyteller, recounting stories from around the world and the lion's share (pun intended) were deeply connected with the natural world. We'll keep you posted as the film continues to take shape.

We still need to raise funds to continue putting this important project together. Have you made your financial committment to the Center this year? If not, this would be an ideal time to support our work and help make our new film a reality. Donate HERE

We have two upcoming film screenings for you:

As I mentioned last month, PBS stations around the country are beginning to schedule broadcasts of Guardians of Our Troubled Waters, our river heroes of the South film. PBS NC (formerly UNC-TV) currently has the following broadcast dates, with more sure to follow. You can watch the PBS version of the film on the following local NC PBS Channels:

- Tuesday, April 12, 09:00 am on Explorer Channel
- Wednesday, April 13, 04:00 pm on Explorer Channel
- Thursday, April 14, 02:00 am on Explorer Channel
- Wednesday, April 20, 10:00 pm on North Carolina Channel
- Thursday, April 21, 03:00 am on North Carolina Channel

Viewers from South Carolina, East Tennessee and South Florida can expect dates on their PBS stations soon!

More coming on this soon!

Please keep in mind that only a small percentage of folks who are on this list actually are regular contributors to our work. If even 20% of those who appreciate our work donated, think of how much more could we do! Please become one of our supporters today by donating HERE or sending your tax deductible contribution to us at:

Center for Cultural Preservation

PO Box 1066

Flat Rock, NC 28731-1066

Thank you sincerely and have a wonderful day.

Sincerely,
